Telling Lies About Hitler The

Lying About Hitler was written following the famous (in history circles anyway) libel trial involving David Irving in 2000. Even typing that sentence I'm tempted to describe the trial as 'of David Irving', and it is important to remember that although in practice the defence exposed Irving's flaws as an historian, in fact the case was brought to court by David Irving himself.

Hitler's Table Talk reveals he continued to wish for a unified Protestant Reich Church of Germany for some time after 1937, which had largely proven unsuccessful. This was in line with his earlier policy of uniting all the Protestant churches so they would purvey the new racial and nationalist doctrines of the regime and act as a unifying rather than divisive force in Germany.

Facts and Lies about Hitler - Calvin University

A big lie (German: große Lüge) is a propaganda technique. The expression was coined by Adolf Hitler, when he dictated his 1925 book Mein Kampf, about the use of a lie so "colossal" that no one would believe that someone "could have the impudence to distort the truth so infamously". Hitler believed the technique was used by Jews to blame Germany's loss in World War I on German general Erich ...

Professor Richard Evans was principal expert witness for the defence. In Telling Lies About Hitler, he describes the trial as "raising in an acute and . . . practical form many of the problems with which I had been wrestling in my book In Defence of History". The book combines a blow-by-blow account of the 28 hours Evans spent on the stand with a much-abridged version of his 740-page report on Irving's use of historical sources.
